Elimination of state athletic support suggested

By John McNamer
Montana Kaimin Reporter

The "Budget Crunch Committee" has recommended that use of state appropriations to support intercollegiate athletics be eliminated on the University of Montana campus and that intercollegiate athletics be assigned a low priority by the UM administration.

The committee, officially known as the President's Committee on Preparedness, made the recommendation because it believes that significant expenditures in support of intercollegiate athletics are irreconcilable with current reductions in the strength and quality of academic programs, according to an April 19 memorandum written by Richard Landini, academic vice-president and the committee's chairman.

The memorandum, entitled "Recommendation on Intercollegiate Athletics," is addressed to UM President Robert Pantzer.

The Montana Kaimin received a copy of the memorandum yesterday through a leak in administration channels and contacted Pantzer for his comments.

Pantzer verified that he had received the memo, but said he had first seen it last Friday and had not had a chance to look at it very well or talk to anyone about it.

Pantzer said that no decision has been made on the athletic department's budget for the next year, but the department was tentatively scheduled for a cut of $20,000 from the previous year's appropriations of $170,000 of state money.

Pantzer said he intended to give the resolution serious consideration, but that even though there was "immediacy in the tone" of the memo, the ideas expressed in it would probably be considered and developed over a period of several years. "We haven't been in the habit of chopping off programs overnight," he added.

Pantzer said he did not think that the resolution was a radical approach towards solving budgetary problems, and said he concurred with some of the opinions expressed in the memo. He said he believes the University has to be very careful in the budgeting of athletic versus academic needs.

According to Landini's memorandum, a resolution was adopted at a March 27 meeting of the Budget Crunch Committee stating:

"that the Committee recommend to the President that intercollegiate athletics be assigned a low-priority on this campus and that he eliminate supporting state appropriated funds."

The memorandum continues, "Recognizing the gravity and seriousness of this resolution, the Committee is constrained nevertheless to present it to you in the light of the severe budgetary restrictions the University now experiences. The Committee is deeply concerned that the University's academic programs are gravely imperiled by the reduction of faculty lines and the limitations on available funds in support of library book acquisitions, laboratory facilities, supplies and capital equipment. The Committee is of the opinion that significant expenditures of State-appropriated funds in support of intercollegiate athletics, in a period of alarming budget limitations, is irreconcilable with concurrent reductions in the strength and quality of academic programs."

Landini's memorandum concludes, "This resolution is not then an expression of contempt for athletics or of animosity for University-sponsored competitive (sic) sports programs. It is, however, an expression of an intensely held opinion that our academic programs should have the highest priority of financial support within the University."

HEW may cut all UM work study

By John McNamer and Steve Heimbrecht
Montana Kaimin Reporters

All work study funds for the University of Montana may be suspended depending on the outcome of a UM audit by a "cooperative endeavor" of federal and state officials, according to John Detmer, regional attorney for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Denver.

In a telephone interview, Detmer told the Montana Kaimin the audit will determine whether the University owes money to the federal government because of misuse of funds.

Detmer said even though the defendants in the recent work-study trial were not criminally liable it does not mean the practices (work study appropriations) were proper.

Detmer said the suspension of work study funding to the University is under review by HEW. "It seems the University of Montana may have taken advantage of some rubber-sided edges of federal programs," said Detmer.

"There were indications at the trial of wrong doings and misapplication of federal funds," Detmer said.

The government had accused Jack Swarthout, UM athletic director and head football coach, and William Belcher, assistant football coach, of diverting more than $227,000 in federal education funds to the athletic department over a five-year period.

"It's not my decision as a lawyer what action will be taken," but the federal government could recoup any misused work study funds from the University by either "suing for it or taking it out of what the University normally gets from the federal government," said Detmer.

HEW officials have been in contact with the Montana state legislative auditor's office, which is expected to release an audit of the athletic department in June. A federal audit may also be conducted, Detmer said.

The Kaimin also interviewed Montana Atty. Gen. Robert Woodahl and Missoula County Attorney Robert (Dusty) Deschamps III in an attempt to determine whether criminal charges will be brought against any of the former defendants in the UM work-study trial by the state of Montana.

Woodahl said that any alleged crimes committed in Missoula County would come under the jurisdiction of the Missoula county attorney, even though the case involved a state institution, and he cited a Montana Supreme Court ruling last year to that effect. He said he had no correspondence from Deschamps on the matter, but said his office would cooperate fully with Deschamps if he did decide to prosecute.

However, Woodahl said "At first blush," it appeared to him that if criminal charges were brought against University officials already tried "it would be double jeopardy."

Deschamps said his office is not considering any action right now because he has not been presented with any evidence that there has been any violation of state law.

He said such evidence may come out after the state's Legislative Audit of the athletic department is released, but he agreed with Woodahl that even if different charges were filed by the state that were brought by the federal government, it would "undoubtedly be double jeopardy against Swarthout and Belcher" since the charges would involve the "same transaction."

Deschamps said he has had no contact with federal authorities concerning the matter.

Obscenity panel scheduled tonight

A panel discussion on Obscenity, Human Values and the Law will be held tonight in SC 131 at 8 p.m.

The panel, sponsored by the Campus Christian Ministers and the Missoula chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) will feature Richard Vandiver, assistant professor in sociology; Dr. Charles Katz, psychiatrist in the Student Health Center; the Rev. David Van Dyke, campus pastor; Robert Campbell, Missoula ACLU chairman; and Robert (Dusty) Deschamps, Missoula County attorney.

A story appearing in the Montana Kaimin last Tuesday stated the panel was cancelled because of schedule conflict with invited panelist Atty. Gen. Robert Woodahl. The panel was not cancelled, but other panelists offered to reschedule it to a date that would be convenient for Woodahl. However, Woodahl has refused to appear or to send a representative from his office.

According to Campbell, Deschamps was chosen as a substitute for Woodahl "because of his recent activities as a book collector," referring to raids on three Missoula bookstores last week conducted by Deschamps and Sheriff John Moe to confiscate allegedly obscene material.

Collective bargaining basic issue today on custodian, food service labor vote

University of Montana non-student Food Service and custodial employees will vote today to decide who will represent them in collective bargaining negotiations with the UM administration, ending an eight-month conflict.

The Retail Clerks Union and the Montana Public Employees Association (MPEA) are competing for the right to represent the Food Service non-student employees, janitorial workers, groundskeepers and animal caretakers.

The approximately 130 employees involved in the conflict have leveled charges of low pay, lack of job security and unworkable grievance procedures against the UM administration.

If a simple majority of the employees votes for collective bargaining, the administration will have to answer the demands of the non-academic personnel, one custodian said.

Non-academic employees received notification of a wage increase on April 11, but the raise remains tentative until final approval by the Board of Regents on April 27. The raise, if approved, will not become effective until July 1.

Because the Physical Plant is subcontracting the custodial duties of four campus buildings to outside firms, custodians and Food Service workers lack job security, according to one custodian. Without written contracts, job security is not just "a gripe but a real concern," one worker said.

New counseling center plans approved

University of Montana President Robert Pantzer has approved plans to consolidate four separate counseling and advising services into a new Center for Student Development.

The plan, drawn up by the Committee on Preparedness, (the Budget Crunch Committee) combines the Counseling and Testing Center, the Graduate Placement Center, the Counseling services provided by the Dean of Students Office and the Academic Advising Office.

The president's decision will take effect July 1.

The Budget Crunch Committee, in making the recommendation to the president, showed that the consolidation would save the University $16,689 while retaining most of the personnel currently employed by the four offices.

"We have a verbal agreement from the administration that we will have a job as long as we want," a custodian said. "But they can make the conditions so bad that you wouldn't want to work."

One custodian told a Kaimin reporter "we are spreading ourselves thin" and said he now has to clean an entire building plus one floor of another by himself.

Although a program for presenting formal grievances exists, only one grievance has been filed since the program began one year ago, Larry Kaul, UM assistant director of personnel, said.

When asked why more grievances had not been processed, Kaul explained the problem as a possible "communication breakdown."

The majority of workers interviewed knew nothing about the grievance procedure.

"People are very unhappy, but they need a job, so they don't say anything," one woman said. "I'm afraid nothing will ever come out because everyone is looking out for their job."

Another worker said that "he went back to frying french fries" after he was told to "shut up" after voicing a grievance at an MPEA meeting.

Tom Schneider, executive director for the MPEA, a group organized to represent all public employees, said that until now he thought salaries was the only problem among University employees.

Pantzer named Fred Weldon to head the new center. Weldon is assistant director of the Counseling and Testing Center.

The center, which will be located in the old library, will have several basic functions:

- To serve as a focal point for dealing with student problems.
- To provide for student referrals to other agencies such as the Health Service and the Clinical Psychology Department.
- To provide the services of testing, career counseling and placement, and to coordinate the academic advising program.

Pantzer also said the center will work with the Mental Health Services Division of the Student Health Service.

MontPIRG charges UM Foundation with supporting national energy crisis

The Montana Public Interest Research Group (MontPIRG) yesterday accused the University of Montana Foundation as being "a supporter of the energy crisis."

Tim Dewart, a MontPIRG research coordinator, said the Foundation owns "substantial" blocks of stock in eighteen electric power and petroleum companies.

The UM Foundation is a corporation that gathers funds for support of the University. Projects supported include the Lubrecht Forest, the UM Computer Operation, the Social Science Institute and the Biological Experiment station at Yellow Bay, on Flathead Lake.

Dewart named Exxon, Atlantic Richfield, Mobil Oil and Montana Power as several of the corporations in which the Foundation has an interest.

Dewart said he thought it "a shame that the University sits on all that power and does nothing constructive with it." He suggested that the Foundation could help elect a conservative or environmental advocate to the board of directors of Montana Power and by doing so "help institute effective reclamation procedures."

Dewart also said the Foundation conducts its business through the Union Bank and Trust Company of Helena whose president is a trustee of the Foundation. "The Union Bank is also one of the ten largest stockholders in Montana Power," Dewart added.

The Director of the UM Foundation, Tom Collins, said that their holdings were "minimal" in the Helena bank.

Collins said the Foundation has a "relatively small" voice in the affairs of the corporations partially owned by the Foundation. He said the stock portfolio of the Foundation is constantly changing, but is never very large.

Keep those tourists coming

The invite-a-friend-to-Montana campaign being conducted by Gov. Tom Judge and the state advertising department is as helpful to Montana as Mata Hari was to the French, and employs tactics about as ethical as schemes used by the little serpent.

The plan calls for the involvement of all Montanans in the demise of their own state. First, Judge and the advertising department solicited a bunch of free newspaper advertisements and radio and television spots. The advertisements urge Montanans to send the state the name of an out-of-state friend. The state then sends that friend a free, color travel brochure of Montana and an invitation to visit the state. The plan then calls for the state government to sit back and let the tourists flock into Montana and, supposedly, spend enough money to keep the state going.

Officials in Judge's office smile and report that, of the 15,000 brochures mailed out in 1970, a conversion check showed that 7,000 families (21,000 people) actually visited Montana bringing with them $2 million. They fail to see that these out-of-staters are making it miserable for Montanans who cannot use the lakes and rivers and wildernesses and parks because they are packed with tourists. They fail to see the tons of litter brought into the state by tourists. They fail to see that more and more tourists are coming to Montana every year and spending less per capita. They fail to see that there are alternatives other than bringing more tourists into the state.

The state advertising department gets an I-thought-that-was-obvious attitude and says, "Tourism is our third largest industry. We've got to promote it—get more tourists."

Montana would benefit from tourism only if there were fewer tourists with more money.

Promotion of our number one industry, agriculture, would benefit Montana most. Increased property taxes, which Judge supported, can hardly be considered helpful to agriculture. Property taxes do not hit tourists since tourists, obviously, do not own land in Montana.

A sales tax, which Judge violently opposed in the fall of 1971, would tax tourists. Agriculturists would not pay any more than any other family in Montana.

The two or three thousand dollars spent on mailing, advertisement production, printing of brochures and promotion of the invite-a-friend-to-Montana program could be saved. Possibly, Montanans would then be able to travel in the summer without being crowded by tourists brought into the state by a government which is unwilling to look at the problem realistically.

Recruiters say thank you

Editor: We wish to express our gratitude to all the University of Montana students and faculty members who treated us with courtesy and friendliness during our three-day visit to the campus April 16th through 18th, and to thank you for the opportunity to represent the Navy in the University Center.

Though we were a bit unnerved by those few students who bombarded us with red paint, and though we came away red-faced and red-uniformed, we recognize that most of you employ more polite and conventional forms of self-expression.

Perhaps our commanding officer will authorize us hostile fire pay for this month.

Thanks again. See you next fall.

McQuirk rebuttal laughable

Editor: At the expense of Bill McQuirk's chin I would like to comment on his long awaited "refutation" of the charges leveled against him.

They are laughable Bill. Example: "but I can't run a decent business if my employees are not happy." There is a great disparity between decency and success. You are a success in business, but only because you're committed to success, with more than an occasional disregard for decency. Why don't you reveal your incredible turn-over rate of "happy employees?" You don't give a damn about employees, only more money.

Have you ever tried to understand why so many people in this community hold you in contempt? When you start whining again about how you've been abused by the public, look back. Look back at all the things you've done all your happy employees and cry in your nickel beers. To paraphrase you, the shit is out of the closet and people are kicking it around and it is ending up all over your face.

The official word

Editor: It's official; at least we don't steal! Think of those poor persons who fail to realize the motto "Light and Truth" is only for public consumption; how the score will be settled! Now is usually the time when privileged faculty look the other way. Such matters don't concern us, they are not sufficiently academic.

Chilly winds from Washington

There is a chill wind blowing out of Washington these days in the form of Watergate rumors, counter rumors and kingly Nixonian proclamations. We hear that, without our consent or Congressional approval, the U.S. Air Force is again bombing Indochina, that the Alaska oil pipeline will be built and that clean air legislation will be postponed in the interest of the economy.

Still, says the White House, the price of fuel will go higher because of conservation considerations and, even though our already intolerable rate of inflation is expected to worsen, Nixon will not consider price-wage controls. And finally we hear that Nixon has suddenly changed his mind on the Watergate affair and decided that his political bedmates might indeed have sullied the White House sheets.

It makes us, the average citizen, feel as if we are helplessly trying to set a course of truth through a sea of public information hopelessly littered with crushing icebergs. We have seen the tip of the iceberg in the form of Watergate, but we can sense that nine-tenths of the lies are buried beneath the surface of the Nixon political machine.

Of one thing we can be sure. Nixon is a skilled political virtuoso. He calls the shots and leaves little to chance.

Does it make any sense that Nixon's closest associates would plan a venture such as Watergate without their politically omniscient boss being aware of such a scheme? We wonder too if Nixon received all those millions of campaign funds because he is such a nice guy and has such a winning personality?

Wonder what under-the-table bargains Nixon had to make with the big business magnates? And don't you sometimes wonder why the present administration will not even consider price controls when the American consumer is screaming for relief.

EVEN NUNS CAN BE LIBERATED.

Yesterday's nuns led a cloistered life. When they ventured out, it was two-by-two. Their roles were traditional and within church institutions.

Things have changed. The world. The Church. The roles women play.

Yet for one order, these changes are hardly apparent. Ever since the Dominican Sisters of the Sick Poor were founded in 1876, they have been engaged in pastoral ministry. They have always been flexible. Always self-motivated. Always had freedom. Why? By the very nature of their work.

The Dominican Sisters of the Sick Poor give free nursing care to the needy in their own homes. They travel alone by bus or by subway. Or by car. Or on foot. And their day doesn't end at five o'clock.

Each case presents a different problem: whether it is bringing physical or spiritual comfort, keeping a family together, counseling or bridging the gap between social agencies, we bring the love and devotion of Christ. We are in direct contact with the people we care for.

You see, we don't have to be liberated. We are.

Missoula County gets federal funds

Missoula County Commissioners disclosed last week that they had allocated $560,377 in federal revenue sharing funds.

The commissioners said in a prepared statement that the funds, representing about two-sevenths of the total funds to be received under the revenue sharing act, were allocated to "those projects in Missoula County which are felt to accomplish the greatest amount of benefit for the public."

The $544,823 received by the county was from the first two 6-month periods of 1972. The money has earned $7,131 interest to date and it is estimated that interest will total $15,554, according to the statement. The budget includes the estimated interest.

The county received the money from the $30.2 billion Federal Revenue Sharing Bill signed by President Nixon on Oct. 20, 1972. Nixon proposed the plan in August 1969. The plan was designed to turn some money raised by federal taxes over to state and local government.

The money was allocated as follows:

- $35,695 to finish payment on votomatic voting machines.

$114,240 to develop or assist in developing recreational and community center facilities in Swan Valley, Lolo, Clinton and East Missoula.

- $10,000 to provide a source of interim funds for the implementation of a county-wide planning effort.

- $1,020 to pay 50 per cent of the cost of printing additional copies of the existing city-county comprehensive plan.

- $4,000 to purchase a car to be used by any county officials when traveling on official business.

- $4,500 to purchase a microfilm reader/printer to relieve congestion on existing equipment.

- $53,616 to build and equip a health center facility in Swan Lake.

- $10,500 to purchase a new weed spraying truck, additional two-way radios and to initiate a "pilot program" for biological weed control.

- $30,000 to develop lands in Ft. Missoula area into recreational facilities.

- $50,000 to pave additional roads in the county.

- $110,000 to build a warehouse and shop near the present road department shops.

- $35,000 to purchase gravel-bearing land for road construction.

- $35,000 to pay architectural fees for all construction projects contemplated under the budget.

- $61,806 as a contingency reserve if preliminary cost estimates are in error.

Athletic budget cuts result in $20,000 MSU deficit

The Montana State University athletic budget has about a $20,000 deficit as a result of the state's $27,000 cut and the Student Senate's $2,300 cut, according to an April 17 article in the Montana Exponent.

The deficit will have to be made up from the athletic reserve fund, according to Athletic Director Tom Parac. As of July 1, 1972, there was $24,650 in the reserve fund.

The Student Senate's funding cuts were: $1,000 off the ski coach's salary, $1,000 off the tennis coach's salary, and $300 from the in-Bozeman travel fund.

Parac said that another year in the red would necessitate considerable slicing of the minor, non-profit programs such as track, cross-country, wrestling, skiing and tennis.

"We'll put a band-aid on this year's budget but if we have an additional funding cutback next year, we will have to start drastically cutting programs," Parac said.

Curry says vapor, disposal problems to plague new mill

The effects of water vapor and water disposal methods which would stem from the proposed U.S. Plywood plant in Bonner have not been adequately studied by the state Air Quality Bureau, Robert Curry, associate professor of environmental geology, said in an interview Monday.

Curry released a three-page letter concerning the proposed plant, April 19, to the press and state and local organizations concerned with pollution in the Missoula area.

Curry's letter was in response to the environmental impact statement issued by the Air Quality Bureau, March 2.

Curry said he was upset because the impact statement "illustrates that the health board may not understand the implications of water vapor release into the narrow Bonner valley."

Curry said that the proposed plant could emit as much steam as 12,000 gallons of water per hour. One of the chief pollutants in the Missoula basin is water vapor, Curry said.

Curry said that water vapor loads the atmosphere with water particles which need energy to evaporate. The energy that would normally be used to circulate and overturn the air is expended to remove the particles. Pollens and pollutants thus stay in the air longer, Curry said. He also said the water vapor could cause longer temperature inversions in the valley.

Curry said that Donald Holtz, chief of the Air Quality Bureau, contends there are no federal standards for emission of water vapor.

Curry said regulations on degradation of air quality exist, and the state could operate under those general laws. "The board appears to be abrogating public responsibility," Curry said.

He said it is easily possible to design plants which do not emit water vapor.

A cooling tower would cost a "trivial amount" of the total investment, Curry said, but the plant would not build one because it is not required by the state.

Curry's second protest to the impact statement concerned the water disposal system. The plant is expected to use 99,000 gallons of water per hour and to give off 12,000 gallons per hour as steam, Curry said.

That leaves 87,000 gallons of water unaccounted for, Curry said. If fluid wastes from the plant are to be disposed of without entering the river runoff, the company must be planning a series of settling ponds or drain fields of rather large capacity, he said.

W. E. Butler, general manager of the Bonner plant, said yesterday that the statement, which was scheduled to be released last Friday, was delayed because the Air Quality Bureau was "trying to answer everyone's questions."

A prison inmate printed $16,000 in counterfeit money, working on the project while legislators toured the Stillwater Prison, the U.S. attorney's office charged yesterday. Federal authorities said Richard Jackson, 53, also managed to walk past guards with the money in a box when he was released from prison last month.

A fourth person has been arrested in connection with an airdrop of supplies to Indians occupying Wounded Knee, a Justice Department spokesman said yesterday. Robert Talbot, 36, was charged with conspiracy and crossing state lines to participate in a civil disorder, according to Deputy Asst. U.S. Atty. Gen. Richard Hellstern.

Rep. Dick Shoup, R-Mont., admitted yesterday that the Watergate case would hurt Republicans, but predicted the impact would be felt less severely in Montana. At a Butte luncheon, Shoup said he agreed that all information concerning the Watergate should be made public.

The Supreme Court agreed yesterday to examine the constitutionality of rules that force women off the job solely because they are pregnant. The issue reached the high court in two cases. The Cleveland city schools appealed the ruling of the U.S. Circuit at Cincinnati that found a ban on teachers more than five months pregnant "clearly arbitrary and unreasonable."

Ecologists "with unreasonable approaches and no thought of compromise" are posing more problems and attacks on electric utility companies than ever before in history, a Montana Power Co. official said yesterday. W.W. Talbot, vice president of Montana Power, told the Northwest Electric Light and Power Association that "utilities recognize the need to have a proper environment," but said ecologists have "succeeded in delaying and sometimes eliminating needed construction of generation, transmission and distribution facilities."

Gov. Thomas Judge transferred the administrator of the state's liquor monopoly to a post with the Department of Highways yesterday. Joseph Shea was named as supervisor of labor compliance and equal opportunity for the highway agency, beginning Monday.

Miss America, 23-year-old Terry Anne Meeuwse, of DePere, Wis., says the swimsuit competition should be eliminated from the annual Miss America Pageant because it is "unnecessary." Meeuwse yesterday described the swimsuit competition as "unnatural" and said she gets angry when someone calls her a beauty queen.

Ruchell Magee will be retried on a charge of aggravated kidnapping in connection with the 1970 San Marin County courthouse shootings that killed a judge and three other persons, California Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger said yesterday. Magee's first trial here on charges of murder and kidnap ended April 3 with a hung jury. Angela Davis was acquitted June 4 of murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges in the case.

A government consultant on energy problems suggested yesterday that all Americans work in their shirtsleeves in summertime to reduce or eliminate air-conditioning demands. John H. Gibbons, director of the University of Tennessee's environment center, also suggested greater use of fluorescent lights in the home as another way of saving electrical energy.

Three Missoula book stores raided

Missoula County authorities raided three Missoula bookstores last Thursday and confiscated allegedly obscene material with a retail value of approximately $17,955.

The stores raided were Book City, 2609 Brooks St., Dunkon Read Book Store, 123 W. Main St., and Garden City News, 329 N. Higgins Ave.

Officers of the Missoula County sheriff's office and the county attorney's office hauled away 3,591 items from the store, mostly books and magazines, according to County Attorney Robert L. Deschamps. No arrests were made.

Deschamps said the three stores were singled out because they were the only ones his office was aware of that carried allegedly obscene material.

He said his office has been receiving intermittent complaints about the stores for the last three months, but that the raids were prompted when "complaints reached a crescendo" following the recent opening of Studio-1, a movie theater advertising X-rated films.

Deschamps said that most of the material confiscated was located in special sections of the stores, sections that contained only allegedly "hard-core" pornographic items. He said that magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse were not taken, nor were books or magazines purporting to be pornographic, but which are, in Deschamps' opinion, a "rip-off" to someone looking for hard-core pornography.

Deschamps said that the retail value of the material taken was about $18,000, but that he estimates the wholesale value to be considerably less.

He said the President's Commission on Pornography has said that most pornographic pocketbooks can be produced for about 10 to 15 cents and a magazine can be produced for about 35 to 40 cents. Many pornographic magazines sell for several dollars, he said.

Deschamps said he also is considering action against local theatres that may be showing obscene films.

The Montana Kaimin contacted the managers of Dunkon Read and Garden City News. Both said that they did not believe they were doing anything illegal by selling the materials that had been confiscated, and both said they did not know yet whether they would take the actions to court.

Deschamps said that the raids were conducted under the provisions of section 94-3601 of the Revised Montana Codes, which makes it unlawful to publish, print or distribute obscene material.

The law says that "obscene" means that "to the average person, applying contemporary standards, the predominant appeal of the matter taken as a whole, is to prurient interest, i.e., a shameful or morbid interest in nudity, sex, or excretion, which goes substantially beyond customary limits of candor in description or representation of such matter."

The law provides misdemeanor penalty of imprisonment for not more than 30 days and/or a fine of not more than $1,000 for persons convicted of a first offense.

Dutch elm disease threatens UM trees

The Dutch elm disease that has killed thousands of American elms in the United States could spread to the American elms on campus, according to Oscar Dooling, forest service plant pathologist. Dooling said in an interview last Tuesday, that there is one confirmed case of Dutch elm disease in Missoula, but that it is not on campus.

He said that 90 per cent of the American elms in Missoula are on the University of Montana campus. The American elms are the trees surrounding the oval, Dooling said.

Dooling said the disease is caused by a fungus that grows under the bark of dead or dying trees. It is carried by elm bark beetles that attack dead or weakened trees and lay their eggs under the bark. The young beetles mature, bore through the bark, and fly to healthy elms, Dooling said. The beetles carry the fungus spores on their bodies.

When the fungus is introduced to a healthy tree it spreads rapidly through the water-conducting vessels and may kill the tree in one season, Dooling said.

The most obvious symptoms of the disease are wilting, curling and yellowing leaves on one or more of the branches, he said.

Bill Hosford, University grounds supervisor, said yesterday that the physical plant has not decided what to do about the threat to the elms.

He said although there is no cure for the disease, there are several methods of controlling it. Hosford said the dead branches could be trimmed from the trees to remove the beetles' nesting places. Another possible method would be to spray the trees with a pesticide to kill the beetles, he said.

Applications open for group leaders

Applications for group leader positions for summer and fall student orientation sessions are available in all residence halls, sorority and fraternity houses and the Dean of Students' Office in the Lodge. One-hundred group leaders are needed.

According to Helen McDuffie, director of orientation, the group leaders' responsibilities are to explain University policies and registration procedures to new students and to help them find an academic advisor. Group leaders may register early with their group and will receive $10 per session.

The new student orientation program will consist of two summer sessions, July 12-13 and August 9-10. The fall session will be September 20-22, just prior to the beginning of classes.

Co-chairman of the group leaders are Jodel Schara, senior in speech pathology and audiology, and Rich Owens, sophomore in wildlife technology.

Applications for group leader must be returned to the Dean of Students' office by May 7.

Hosford said he has applied to the University Pest Control Committee for permission to spray the trees if it becomes necessary.

He said the disease might not spread to the campus, but he added, "Every state in the union has lost the battle and I can't see that Montana will be any different." Hosford said no matter what is done, the trees can not be saved if the disease spreads.

The University Pest Control Committee was formed to minimize the hazards of pesticides and to more effectively control unwanted pests on campus.

University Sanitarian Ken Read, who is a member of the committee, said when he receives Hosford's request he will refer it to the committee members for approval.

AMERICAN ELM TREES lining the Oval are in danger of contracting the Dutch elm disease, according to Oscar Dooling, forest service plant pathologist. Dooling said every state in the country has been unsuccessful in combating the disease which is carried by elm bark beetles. (Montana Kaimin photo by Gary MacFadden)

International Week begins

Three Japanese films will be shown tonight at 9 in the Montana Rooms of the University Center. The films are being presented as part of International Week which is sponsored by University of Montana foreign students.

Two of the films are entitled Spirit of Zen, and Youth of Japan. Another film features the scenery of Japan, according to Margaret Mcquire, UM Foreign Student adviser.

Throughout the week a display of handicrafts, folk dress and needlework of UM foreign students will be shown in the UC Art Gallery, according to an Information Service release.

Nations represented in the display are Laos, India, Nepal, Egypt, Iran and Ethiopia.

Gallery hours are noon to 3 p.m. on weekdays and 7-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Other activities include a soccer game tomorrow at 5 p.m. at the soccer field behind the Field House, with Foreign Students taking on the Yanks.

Lecture to be given on farms in France

Edmond Cabrol will give a lecture in French about life on small farms in France tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in LA 11. There is no admission charge.

The lecture is of special interest to people contemplating visiting a small French farm and to those who already have done so. A question-and-answer period will follow Cabrol's presentation. Questions may be asked in French or English.

Cabrol is the husband of Daniele Cabrol, a visiting associate professor in French at the University of Montana. He is pursuing a degree in economics in France. Cabrol was raised on a small farm in the Herault district in southern France.

Thursday night a film on India, The Guide, will be shown at 8 in the UC Ballroom. The Guide is based on a book by Indian novelist, R.K. Narayan.

A lecture by Dr. J. Francis Rummel, dean of the UM School of Education, on Conflicts in Cultures will be presented at 7:30 Friday night in the Montana Rooms of the UC.

International Week will end Saturday with an International Buffet Dinner at 6:30 p.m. in the Gold Oak Room. Tickets for the banquet may be bought from UM foreign students, at the UC Information Desk, Stoverud's Jewelers, or at the Dean of Students' Office.

Cost for the dinner is $1.50 for UM students and children under 12 years of age, and $2.50 for adults.

Drive for Easter seals concluded

The Missoula Easter Seal Drive concluded Saturday—"Lily Tag Day"—with volunteer workers collecting money for Easter seals in downtown Missoula and in door-to-door soliciting.

According to Bill Phillips, Missoula County chairman for the drive, $282 was collected downtown. The amount collected in door-to-door soliciting has not been tabulated, Phillips said.

The lily tags are small paper lilies made by handicapped persons to represent contributions to the Easter Seal Society, Phillips said. The society uses 97 per cent of all money collected in Montana for services, and three per cent is used for national advertising and research, he said.

"This is using Montana money for needs right here in Montana," according to Phillips.

Harkness' 'The Flaw' to deal with voids

By Nancy Stevens
Montana Kaimin Reporter

The Flaw, an offbeat comedy written by Ed Harkness, opens Thursday night in the Masquer Theater as a part of Playwrights' Theater 73.

Playwrights' Theater consists of four original one-act plays written by University of Montana students and produced by the University Department of Drama.

The twenty-minute play is a blend of a realistic situation with surreal effects, according to Harkness, graduate student in English. He said the play deals with a middle-aged man, Al, and his sister-in-law, Betty, and the flaws in their lives. Al and Betty are conversing in the living room when Al notices a small flaw in the floor.

During the play, the flaw develops into a gaping void into which a couch, chairs and clothing disappear. Al and Betty take note of the hole and even peer down it with binoculars, but are not frightened by it. Harkness said the flaw represents flaws in their own lives and in the way the world looks at life.

Al and Betty walk around the flaw, and continue their conversation as if the flaw were not there, just as persons lead their lives without thinking about dying, Harkness said.

Ed Harkness

Lighting will be used to create the effect of the flaw, he said. Parts of the stage will be blacked out until Al and Betty are backed against the wall in order to avoid the void. Someone will walk on stage and carry out various items that fall into the flaw.

Harkness said his writing has been influenced by contemporary experimental playwrights such as Eugene Ionesco and Harold Pinter.

He said he emphasizes the "terrifying ordinariness" of ordinary situations.

Harkness said his main interest is poetry. He has had 15 poems published by literary magazines in the past year and recently received his first paycheck from a publisher, he said. He is working on a collection of poems for his master's thesis. Harkness is a Seattle native and received his B.A. in English from the University of Washington.

Another Harkness play, Marriage on the New Moon, was selected for Playwrights' Theater last year. The selections for the production this year were made last January by Allen Cook, assistant professor of drama, and members of the UM drama department.

Bill Gillespie, graduate student in drama, plays Al. Betty is portrayed by Donna Holmes, senior in history. Other cast members are Debbie Fleming, freshman in music, John Duckworth, freshman in drama, and Jon Hammer, graduate student in drama, directs.

The Flaw will run Thursday and Friday nights with Rae Horan's The Likely Saga of James T. Thayer.

The performance begins at 8:15. Tickets are $2 general admission and $1.50 for students and are available at the Western Montana National Bank or by calling 243-4581 after noon.

Entries for the Missoula Festival of the Arts juried photography show close tomorrow at 6 p.m. According to Christine Nordbye, festival director of publicity, more than 300 photographs in the categories of portraits, sports, nudes, scenics and commercial-industrial are expected.

Any number of prints, not to exceed 16" x 20", may be entered. The entry fee is $1 per print and entry blanks are available at the Rosenblum Gallery where entries are to be delivered. The photography show will be at 93 Chrysler-Plymouth.

First, second and third prizes will be awarded in each division and a grand prize winner will receive a cash award.

Two juries will view the photographs. The first jury is composed of Doug Brown of Haugen's, Harley Hettick of the Missoulian, Robert Kiley, University dean of fine arts, Bob Henry, camera maker, and Lee Nye, free-lance photographer.

The second jury is composed of Kiley, Nye and Marion Lacy, commercial photographer from Whitefish. Lacy's work has appeared in national magazines and his murals have been purchased in England, Canada, South America and throughout the United States.

World of Bruce to be presented

The World of Lenny Bruce, a free one-man show based on the life and writings of the late comedian, will be presented tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom.

Frank Speiser will portray Bruce. Speiser is understudy to Cliff Gorman, star of the Broadway show Lenny.

The first part of the program will be devoted to The Words of Lenny Bruce. This is a straight comedy routine featuring Bruce's satirical comments about American morality, hang-ups and perversions.

The second portion of the show, The Trials of Lenny Bruce, shifts from comedy to drama as Speiser gives a portrayal of Bruce's struggles with the law.

Bruce was arrested and prosecuted several times for the alleged obscurity of his bitter and often political humor.

Speiser received his Master of Fine Arts degree from the Yale School of Drama.

The performance is sponsored by Program Council.

Cure plays tonight

Joanne Cure, mezzo soprano, will present a faculty recital tonight at 8:15 in the Music Recital Hall.

The performance will include Agrippina by Handel, Dido and Aeneas by Purcell, Ganymed by Schubert, Il Barbiere di Siviglia by Rossini, Clair de Lune by Gabriel Faure, Quatro Madrigales Amatorios by Joaquin Rodrigo and Wild Swans by John Duke.

Cure will be accompanied on the piano by Jacqueline Compton.
